We are pushing onward every year, and every year the reports of our success are more glowing. Still there is an enormous amount to be done a combat the bosts of evil that are all lied against social uplift and civibetterment. This modern ernsade nov numbering in its ranks a million of our best women has long since passed he stage of doubt and experiment and us taken its place among the biggest of present day world movements. and gave us the lecture she was later to WHY THE "DRYS" DID NOT CELEBRATE

Comment has been made upon the I want to speak of a most notable fact that the "Drys" made no demons instance of generosity that occurred stration over the results of the election on Monday, September 28. They were too profoundly grateful and too deeply impressed with the significance of the results to express what they felt by have done. The matter being brought shouting and beating drums. They were not unmindful of the work yet to be done before what was begun on that day is completed.

Appreciate the Responsibility. And too, they keenly felt all that was implied in a remark made by a "wet" adherent: "It is a great responsibility to assume to disarrange the omestic and business affairs of so nany people," At no time have the "Dry" workers been unmindful of this responsibility or with out genuine regret for whatever of inconvenience or bardship might accompany the regiod of readjustment. They could not have gone forward in their work except they realized that the liquor traffic over the entire extent of the land works untold lomestic and business harm; that the number inconvenienced by its abolition is infinitesimal compared with the number who suffer because of its existence. No Comfortable Reforms.

In the language of Senator Beveridge: There is no progress without pain; there is no such thing as a comfort, able reform." Every invention of lapor-saving machinery threw large number) of men out of diployment and ofter produced riots. The abolition of Afri an slavery disorganized the entire in dustrial system of the slave-holding States and yet fifty years after the war to same man would want to re-establis? lavery. These are but two examples The whole line of march of humanity from savagery to as much civilization as we have attained is marked with the stains of bleeding feet and punctuated with sighs and groans. "There is no progress with out pain. There is no such thing as a comfortable reform.

Later Would Be Too Late.

Happily we in America have vast adeveloped resources waiting to be leveloped by capital and human labor. I we have not enough brains and in itiative to take advantage of these of portunities now, what would we be ofter fifty years more of alcoholic de generation?

A Boon to Those in the Business.

No one should be more grateful for he results of Monday's election and for he general frend of the movement against alcohol than those who are in the liquor business. For two generations some of the best families in Maysmor traffic. It has hampered and emcarrassed every protestant church is he city as for back as goes the memory if the oldest inhabitant. And now hese excellent people are to be liberat d from its thralldom before it fastens ts clutches on the third generation Happy children! better put their feet inder plain desk tables, eat from irontone china and use cotton napery than o sit at mahogany, furnished with Dresden, Crystal and Damask at the ost of the high values their elders have

The Old Order Changeth.

Soon there will be no more searching for ministers for our churches who have shoe strings for back bones, who are taking orders from an official board in stend of from the Head of the church whose messengers they are and from whom they hold their commission; a: gore putting the skids under men with rore brains and conviction that offical boards bargained for; no more de aying men fellowship in fraternal orders because they are engaged in a business that is against all these orders stand for; no more denying men life insurance policies because they are injuring their health and shortening their lives by the use of a poisonous drug sold and used as a beverage; no more pointing the finger of scorn at innocent little hildren because their parents are engaged in a business that works mishief to the community. Thank God that these fittle ones will not inherit a business which will hamper and embarrass their mature lives.

Time For Sympathy, Not Censure. Nor does it come with good grace that any should censure or play, Holier than thou any more than in the days when the growth of public opinion made slavery no longer possible. There was a time when none or only a few saw the evils either of slavery or the liquor traffic and it ill-becomes any who happen to be free from its toils to censure those to whom it came as an inherf
